A CONTEMPORARY CATHOLIC THEORY OF COMPLEMENTARITY

PROF. LISA SCHILTZ
Tuesday, October 28, 2014
OSF Library Leather Room (108) Noon – 1:00 pm

This talk explores some of the philosophical foundations for an understanding of complementarity that builds on Sr. Prudence Allen's notion of "integral" rather than "fractional" complementarity, setting the groundwork for a contemporary Catholic theory of complementarity that incorporates many of the insights of modern feminism.

The Siena Symposium for Women, Family and Culture is an interdisciplinary faculty group focused on building the civilization of love. Quaerentes Veritatem (The Truth Seekers) is an interdisciplinary forum for the discussion of the intersection of life and thought with faith; it is co-sponsored by the Department of Catholic Studies and the Department of Philosophy.
